

San Diego County's 2011 REDISTRICTING

San Diego County's 2011 Redistricting

You are invited to participate in the County's 2011 redistricting process. A series of upcoming public meetings and the County's redistricting website are two good ways to learn more and get involved.

What is County redistricting?

State law requires the County Board of Supervisors to adjust the boundaries of the County's five supervisorial districts every ten years to balance their populations based on the federal census.

These adjustments may change which supervisorial district residents live in, so the public has a stake.

The Board has appointed a Redistricting Advisory Committee to help gather public opinion through a series of meetings.

After gathering this input, the Committee will prepare a report to the Board of Supervisors that will include up to three recommended redistricting plans. The Board will gather more public comment, then introduce and adopt a redistricting plan that will be effective in early September.

The website is a one-stop resource, with answers to frequently-asked questions and other helpful information.

Video of all Redistricting Advisory Committee meetings streams live on the site, and the public can view past meetings there too.

Members of the public who want to submit a full redistricting plan or give a suggestion to the Redistricting Advisory Committee should visit the website for more information. The deadline for submitting plans is May 9.

The site is continually updated, and residents can subscribe on the website to receive email alerts when there is new content posted. All Redistricting Advisory Committee meetings, agendas, minutes and proposed redistricting plans will be posted to the website.
